WORKING ON PLAN OF OYSTER SUPPLY

are experimenting to obtain oyster spawn to be used in replenishing the supply of eysters, just as the bureau, by artificial propagation, keeps the shad from becoming extinct.

Indications are that the experiments will be successful and that the ovater supply may be increased to an extent at least to offset the inreads of the tongers into the natural sup-leads a Baltimore mathematician to a dream of sixty-six dectillion oysters dream of sixty-six dectillion oysters acrowding the waters of the earth. Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries will be more than laden, according to his estimate. He figures it this way:

"The oyster is the most prolific living thing in the world. It is estimated the Maryland cyster of good size lays about 16,000,000 eggs. If size lays about 10,000,000 eggs. If half of these were developed into fe-male systems there would be produced by a single female 8,000,000 descend-ants in the first generation, and in the second 8,000,000 times 8,000,000, or 64,000,000,000,000, in the fifth gener-ation nearly 33,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000, 000,00 cover the earth eight times." He falls to take into account the sad fact that only about one out of every million oysters spawned sur-wives to maturity. The others die in incubation or afterward.
